OEM Approvals

Car owners are accustomed to certain standards of performance, quality and appearance in their vehicles. They also expect these standards to be maintained over time, even after an accident.

Car manufacturers want automotive refinish products to deliver a paint finish as close as possible to the original automotive OEM coating. Standox refinish products go through a series of technical tests which are based on various criteria established by the car manufacturers such as colour accuracy, product performance, services and distribution networks.

Standox has attained approvals from all leading manufacturers. This makes us an ideal partner for bodyshops, the car manufacturers and dealers globally.
