Standox supports bodyshops with a comprehensive range of training opportunities. With over 40 Information Centers across 35 countries, business owners and refinishers can broaden their knowledge and become familiar with new techniques. The range of Standox courses extends from seminars lasting several days, consultations and workshops through to regional events. This is where bodyshop professionals can find precisely the training they urgently need, whatever the subject.

On-site training.

Whenever it's not possible to train refinishers at a Standox Information centre, our technical training staff will work with you to organise customized training courses at your bodyshop. In some countries we have multiple locations where training can be conducted, or alternatively we also conduct training directly in the customer's premises. By contacting your local Standox Technician suitable arrangements can be made to cater for all customers.

Standox Technical Training – designed by professionals for professionals.

Depending on local requirements, Standox Information Centres offer different training courses and seminars covering different disciplines. Courses range from the application to eco-friendly ProFuture products to colouristic, MicroRepair and to forward looking technologies such as UV cured materials. Additionally there are a number of additional courses which vary from country to country; these are tailored to the market needs.
